

Minimizing the Impact of Tariffs

How are you managing the increase in tariffs?

The increase in raw material costs may result in reduced sales and lower margins thus giving companies who successfully manage this a competitive edge. You could raise your prices, purchase material from a new supplier, defer other investments, or let the tariffs eat away at your bottom line. But, for how long? Every individual needs to work together to minimize the impact. Join us to learn from your peers how they are managing the changing landscape of tariffs and their lessons learned along the way.
