

Learning to Recognize & Remove Waste

How do you help others see waste?

Training all employees how to recognize everyday forms of waste could considerably increase your pace of improvement but barriers always get in the way. How can you get everyone to speak the same improvement language and how do you make sure what's been identified gets acted on? Join us to hear examples from local practitioners with different operating environments and company cultures, how they have helped their employees be on the same page to really see waste.
