

Leadership Style and Versatility

Understanding Communication Style Differences

Offered as part of the Supervision Fundamentals Certification

Your instructor:

Judy Hartley has more than 20 years of hands-on experience assisting organizations with leadership and team development, as well as customer-focused process improvement initiatives.

Leadership means getting work done by influencing other people. Research shows that the most effective leader-managers have developed a specific set of influence skills: in Style Awareness and Versatility. During this program they learn about the strengths and potential blind spots of their own style and that of others. They also learn to identify other people's styles and how to adjust their style to relate more comfortably with others. A focus is placed on applying understanding of style differences and versatility to issues of supervision and leadership.

After completing this workshop participants should be able to:

- Identify two basic behaviors which create differences in social style/communication style
- Learn about four basic communication styles and their behavioral cues
- Recognize the strengths and potential blind spots of each style
- Adapt behavior to reduce tension and work effectively with others
- Apply understanding of style and versatility skills to supervision and leadership
- Use these new skills to work best with co-workers, managers, customers and suppliers
